

The Career Resource Centre's “Best Picks”

The Road to Human Resources?

Here are some of our favourites:

Human Resources Further Education Binder

This great resource outlines the post-grad human resource programs available at various colleges and universities around Ontario. It is organized by institution, and each program is described in detail, providing the reader with class schedules, program requirements, and fees and financial aid. College programs are placed alongside university programs in a comprehensive way that allows for direct comparisons to be made. Great for students who are interested in the Human Resource field, but want information about specific educational institutions and the programs they offer.

Section: Education - Directories / Programs

Careers in Business

Authors: Lila B. Stair and Leslie Stair

An extremely useful resource for anyone interested in pursuing a career in business. It provides detailed descriptions of various positions within human resources, and it is made clear that this is a diverse field with a number of different career path options. This publication outlines the educational requirements of human resource employees, and lists personality attributes and the skills required to succeed, including ability to work with individuals, written communication skills, and teaching abilities. Those who are interested in researching human resources should flip to page 179.

Section: Occupational Information

Past Issues of HR Professionals

A collection of Human Resource magazines that outline various issues for human resource professionals, including writing policies, social media concerns, protecting company reputations, and the stress associated with data accumulation, analysis, and providing information for key decision-makers. This resource brings together 9 useful HR magazines, making the information extremely accessible to students who are interested in researching the field of Human Resources.

Section: Professional Associations

Login to Navigator to search the full listings: www.wlu.ca/career

LAURIER
Career Development Centre